

Human Services - Child and Family Studies Concentration

About this Composite Major

The Human Services major prepares you to meet the growing demand for human service workers, whose occupations encompass a broad range of helping professions. The program combines courses from the disciplines of communications, sociology, and psychology to provide an overall understanding of the field. The curriculum is designed to provide a comprehensive understanding of human behavior and to develop the skills necessary to function as a human services professional.

The Child and Family Studies concentration in the Human Services major prepares graduates who strive to work with a wide range of client populations in a variety of settings. The curriculum provides flexibility through a broader range of multidisciplinary course options, including education, communication, psychology, sociology, management, economics, and health and physical education. After completing a core set of classes, students work with their advisor to tailor elective courses to meet their personal professional objectives.

Meet a Student

"I have gained many skills throughout my college career including empathy, interpersonal communication, problem solving, and analytical thinking. The biggest part of my job is interviewing clients. In order for clients to open up about scary subjects they need to feel comfortable with me. These skills have improved my interviewing, report writing, and objective analysis of family dynamics." - Sheri Rosenau, class of 2018

"The human services field is important because it focuses on the well-being of individuals. It helps people achieve self-sufficiency and the ability to live a better life." - Karsyn Maine, class of 2023

Career Opportunities

Students pursuing the Child and Family Studies concentration of the Human Services major prepare themselves for a range of careers focused on the needs of children and/or families in both for-profit and non-profit sectors. The rewarding careers include, but are not limited to:

- K-12 paraprofessional
- Preschool and daycare center management
- After-school program direction
- Work in healthcare and social services agencies

As in the general Human Services concentration, graduates also may pursue careers, including:

- Youth worker
- Social services liaison
- Director of residential facilities
- Family support worker
- Residential counselor
- Life skills instructor
- Client advocate
- Case manager
- Intake interviewer

- Community organizer
- Home health aide
- Social work (with completion of a master's degree in social work)

Practical Experience

Completion of an internship is required. Majors who have a cumulative GPA of 2.50 are eligible to apply for semester-long internships, for which students earn 3-12 credit hours. The internship provides supervised training in various regional agencies and service organizations. Students have completed their internships in various places, such as Head Start, K-12 public schools, Sheyenne Care Center and other long-term care facilities, and Barnes County Social Services.
